C.A.M.P. has joined a newly formed and innovative alliance to help C.A.M.P.ers achieve their potential through funds generated from real estate transactions. The alliance is called List for Kids, and it is the philanthropic genius of Bo J. DePena, 11. Bo is a local entrepreneur who combined his fervent passion for helping children with his savvy as a realtor to create this unique non-profit venture.

Here is how List for Kids benefits C.A.M.P.ers while saving home buyers and sellers money. As an example when a home is sold through List for Kids, an immediate savings is realized. Instead of paying the normal six percent commission, the home seller pays a three percent brokerage commission fee to the selling realtor/broker for procuring the buyer, a one percent tax-deductible donation to participating charity, and $500 administrative fee to List for Kids to cover for its listing and transaction cost.
